

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Advocate of Peace

VOL. LXXVII

AUGUST, 1915

NUMBER 8

In Confidence

THE ADVOCATE OF PEACE would be of a kindly and timely service to its readers. In the light of our modern need it aims to reincarnate the international principles of William Jay, William Ladd, Elihu Burritt, and the other founders, to the end that there may yet be developed a substitute for international wars.

Its spirit is to overcome and prevent, so far as possible, racial and international ill will, and to do this by revealing the legal, moral, and spiritual principles at the basis of national advantage. It would, therefore, state pertinent facts of law, history, economics, and religion with clarity and accuracy, frankly and without prejudice.

In the place of direct attempts to guide and to preach, it would place a genuine interpretation and intrinsic merit. It courts a brave and open inquiry, a statesman-like and indefatigable promotion of international intelligence. Its columns are open to such items of world importance as are of a permanent value, and to art which is relevant and beautiful. Impersonal and dignified, the editorial policy aims also to be conservatively in advance of the age; yet radical views of an intelligent order find in its columns a ready welcome.

It calls upon its readers for criticism and aid, to the end that it may continue to meet progressively the practical test of a growing paid circulation. The ADVOCATE OF PEACE represents the members of the American Peace Society; it belongs to them. The members of the American Peace Society are therefore responsible partners in its upbuilding and in the promotion of the ideals for which it stands.